It's a minefield, right?

You don't plan weddings very often and you're trying to make sense of what you need and what you don't.

You're also getting bombarded with "good advice".

Nothing brings out the opinions of well meaning family and friends like a wedding... well... except maybe when you start a family, but that's a whole other Pandora's Box.

Deep down you've got a pretty good idea of what you want and it may not be exactly the same as your sister's best friend's cousin's neighbour did at their wedding last year.

Even if Aunty Joyce says you have to carry something blue, mum insists that all brides wear a veil, dad wants to "give you away", your colleague had a sand ceremony or worse, nanna wants to play "here comes the bride" on her piano accordion.....

Not all of these ideas may align with your vision.

This may be one of the only times in your life when you're not fully across everything available and do-able. Google and Pinterest are just doing your head in and you're ready for someone with shiploads of experience to act as your sounding board.

Why me ?

Because I get it.

When I was married in about 400BCE we didn't have a plethora of choices or freedom to be ourselves so there were no decisions to make. You did what everyone else did and the ceremony was the boring bit you just had to suffer through before you could party.

Thankfully, those days are over.

There's a good chance I've been to more weddings than any of your well meaning friends and relatives. I can put everyone's ideas through the filter of my experience.

My job is to listen to what you have to say, get to know you and help flesh out your good ideas into a meaningful, well crafted celebration.

My Gen Y children are constantly telling me I'm not funny, but they're wrong. I can be funny AF when it's appropriate and so sharp I cut myself most days...yeah, I know it's not that cool to toot my own trumpet, but this is the elevator pitch after all :) My most often repeated compliment in the aftermath is "she felt like family".

What do You Get?

You may have already seen my slightly different list of inclusions on the website. Here's the why.

A listening ear

You have some great ideas but you're just not sure how to make them happen. I'm here to soak it all up and bring your ideas to life

No rules

You deserve a unique ceremony that celebrates your journey. Whatever you want, I'm here for you.

Effortless legal process

Because you're paying me to be across that.

No lengthy questionnaires

So you don't feel like you're applying for a home loan.

Relaxed meetings (via video or in person)

Over coffee, wine, or my favourite - Sunday breakfast.

24/7 support

Because there will always be questions.

Wit and Wisdom

I know you're really good at what you do, but if you've never tied that knot before it can be a bit daunting. Weddings are what I do; really good.

Calm and Confidence

It can all become a bit of a blur, especially on the day when the nerves kick in. It's a safe bet I've been to more weddings than most people there and I've never met a problem I couldn't solve.

Plus all the things everyone else lists

Yada yada yada - we all do - no biggie.

Why do I love this photo?

Because I'm there, telling the story of how two people discovered each other and have spent the last 7 years building a life and a family. And because no one is looking at me.

So let me tell your story
Let me get to know
The secrets of your hearts and minds
What made your true love grow?
We can shout it from the rooftops or just whisper to a few
But the memories we make this day
will be uniquely you.
I'll weave my wordsmith magic
around your special day
As we tell the world your story
with the words you want to say.

Or book a meeting!

How much? I will provide a quotation after we've spoken; everyone is different..
